Cultivating a Sustainable Future with Jan Seva Mandal

Our partner, Jan Seva Mandal (JSM), under Bombay Jesuits is committed to transforming agriculture by encouraging organic farming practices that are both sustainable and nature-friendly. Through our training programs and field demonstrations, we equip farmers with the tools and knowledge to adopt methods that preserve essential natural resources like land, water, and forests—resources vital to the survival of Adivasi communities.

Not only do we provide training, but we also offer subsidies for compost pits, slurry containers, insect spray drums, and farming implements, helping smallholder farmers ease their transition to sustainable practices. We also collaborate with other NGOs, align our efforts with government programs, and focus on research-driven agricultural innovations to benefit the community.

While the journey toward sustainable agriculture is full of challenges—such as limited resources, labor-intensive farming, and competition from industrial wages—JSM is steadfast in its mission. By harmonizing Adivasi native skills with modern, nature-friendly technologies, we're working patiently and collaboratively with farmers to achieve long-term success.

Your support can help us expand our initiatives and reach more smallholder farmers. Get involved today:

MAIN India Leads the Way in Community Awareness

Caring Through Sharing's partner, Migrant Assistance and Information Network India (MAIN India), has successfully conducted impactful awareness programs across Chhattisgarh, Odisha, and Gumla, Jharkhand. These initiatives have played a crucial role in fostering community engagement and addressing critical social issues.

A heartfelt thank you to the dedicated team at MAIN India for their unwavering efforts in driving meaningful change at the grassroots level!

Empowering Lives Through Education: A Glimpse into REAP's Impact

Caring Through Sharing's partner, REAP Child NGO, is making remarkable strides in transforming lives through education.

Click the link below to watch a short video featuring Ms. Nisha Sinha, a passionate Nursery and STEM teacher at the REAP Learning Center in Jai Bhim Nagar, Kalwa West. In the video, Ms. Sinha shares her inspiring journey as an educator and highlights how REAP is empowering slum communities through education.
